College Experience during COVID-19

Freshman year of college is normally scary and nerve-racking because it is your first time attending school in higher education. As I was a kid, I would always imagine what my life would be like when I attend college. From the classes, I would take to dreading the late nights that I would have to endure to complete assignments. I was mental, well almost mentally for the college, until COVID came! I along with hundreds and thousands of other students was forced to do online learning because of this pandemic. I've personally never been to "on the ground" or campus because this is my first time attending college but I'm somewhat happy because I never really wanted to go "on the ground" because I didn't personally want to be around people nor have to talk to them. Virtual learning or online class was a process to get used to because I've never done online schooling before, so this was new to me. I like virtual learning much better than "on the ground" because I feel better having class in the comforts of my home and I feel like it's easier to learn because you have more access to information that you need. My desire and expectations for my future college classes is to continue having online classes honestly because in my opinion I like online and would not mind continuing taking it. Because now I've seen to be doing very well in my academics and I plan to keep it like that.
